Excerpt: . . . The George Washington University BULLETIN Vol. VI June, 1907 No. 2 THE GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY, MOVEMENT. To share in this great work--the realization of George Washingtons desire for a great university at the Capital of the Nation--all good Americans are invited. It is our purpose to build up in Washington an institution worthy of the name it bears. The promoters and adherents of The George Washington University Movement ask YOU to help to this end. INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY. This Movement to establish The George Washington University as a great non-sectarian institution on a private foundation began four years ago with the revision of its charter by Act of Congress. Its genesis is found in the efforts successfully exerted by President Needham to merge as far as possible under one corporation the agencies and facilities for advanced intellectual training already existing in Washington. Under its new auspices the internal development of the university has been marked. The Board of Trustees has been strengthened and its national character emphasized by the addition of men eminent in the financial, scientific, and professional life of the Republic. Greater unity has been attained by the consolidation of departments. An enthusiastic University spirit has been aroused in faculty and students. About forty professors and instructors, graduates of leading American universities, have been added to the teaching staff. The purpose is manifest in councils and faculties to measure up to the highest university standards and ideals. Evening classes have...
