Not illustrated. 1904 Excerpt: .some small and simple, others large, with evidence of broken down septa, pointing to the fusion of two or more smaller cysts into one large one. In the case of infants, irregular branching cavities are seen, surrounded by connective-tissue, especially abundant in the portal spaces, but by no means limited to them, and sometimes occurring inside the lobule amid normal liver-cells. Dr. Kennedy (7) describes one or two fibrous nodules, which he considers to be the contracted walls of cysts which have closed. With these may be compared the appearances described in Case 1, where the process of conversion into connective tissue is seen taking place in several parts of the field. In a few instances the cysts have been found principally among the liver cells in the lobules, and away from the region of increase in the connective-tissue. These cysts have been associated with the vacuolation of the liver-cells to be presently described, and have a very narrow wall of fibrous tissue without epithelial lining. The secreting cells of the liver vary greatly in the different cases: in most they appear comparatively normal, except when atrophied by encroachment of the connective-tissue, or by pressure on the cysts. In others there is more or less of a fatty change; in my case (1) this is very advanced. In a few instances distinct vacuolisation of the cells has been recorded. Dr. Pye-Smith s (5) case is perhaps the most remarkable example, and there appears no doubt that...
