Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1916 edition. Excerpt: . . . on, in May, 1910, the defendant Kimball was elected a director in place of the defendant Hodgson. The defendant Michener moved to Victoria early in 1909, and became sales-agent for the companys coal. The defendant Kimball, practically the only member of the directorate who had paid cash for his shares, lived in New York and did not attend board meetings. Friction, however, developed, and an antagonism between what may be called the Victoria group, represented on the board by the defendants Arbuthnot and Savage (for Moran though a director did not attend in person) and the New York group, represented by the defendants Wishard, Michener, and Kimball. Of the New York group, however, the defendant Michener was the only one on the ground, so to speak, and he could exercise little influence. His investments in the company were out of commissions on the sale of the companys stock. . . The situation was aggravated by the fact that contemporaneously with the incorporation of the plaintiff company, the original promoter-vendor-directors had entered into an agreement to pool their shares. The defendant Wishard says the idea was to keep control in the promoter-vendors as against the subscribing public; the defendants Arbuthnot and Savage say it was to keep the defendants Wishard and Hodgson from putting their shares on the market in competition with treasury shares. I think both are right; but, however this may be, the pooled shares to the extent of 1, 137, 500 worth,...
