Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: . persons and business within its borders as applied to a person in the employ of the Singer Manufacturing company, a corporation of New Jersey, who went from place to place in Montgomery county, Missouri, with a horse and wagon, soliciting orders for the sale of the Singer sewing machines, having with him in the wagon a new machine which he offered for sale to various persons at different places in said county, and sold and delivered to a purchaser in said county, said machine having been made by said company in New Jersey, and was its property and was forwarded by it to Missouri to said person, as its agent, for sale on its account, and was so sold by him on account of said company, he having no peddler's license at the time. Mr. Justice Gray, who delivered the opinion of the court, says in part, after citing the early case of Howe Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S., 677: It has been strenuously argued that that decision is inconsistent with earlier and later decisions of this court upon the subject of the powers of the several states as affected by the grant of the constitution to congress of the power to regulate commerce. It becomes necessary, therefore, to examine those decisions with care, beginning with the earlier ones. In the leading case of Brown v. Maryland (1827), 25 U. S., 12 Wheat., 429 6:678, in which it was adjudged that a statute of...
