And the Horticulture Buildings: University Farm, Davis October 24, 1922 The ultimate consumers in the United States pay between three and four billion dollars per year for these dairy products. The successful conduct of dairy production, manufacturing and sales, and the proper education of the public as to food values of dairy products require the application of science at almost every point. Rule of thumb methods long since were discarded. Twenty-five years ago the task of preparing a report on dairy education in the United States was assigned to your speaker. The report was published by the Federal Department of Agriculture and contains this statement: Modern advances in dairy knowledge have been rapid; the scientist and inventor have caused the apparatus and routine in use a quarter of a century ago to be almost entirely discarded and replaced by more profitable machinery and more accurate methods. .It is probable that. these improvements have not much more than begun. These words written twenty-five years ago...
