Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Transactions of the Maine State Pomological Society: For the Year 1902 There are many things in fruit growing that none of us can explain. One of these was the phenomenal crop of 1901 - phenomenal in this respect: that there were few orchards where all the trees bore fruit, while parts of orchards and localities bore very little fruit. Some one describing the crop said it was patchy. This year some of the same conditions prevail, and while there are no localities in Maine with a full crop, there are not many where there are above 50 percent. This year like last the spring was cold, wet and late. The bloom was not a very full one, and the bee men say it was too cold for the bees to work among the flowers, while others think the rain may have prevented polination. Fortunately, perhaps, the blossoms and foliage came late, so that nowhere in the State does it appear that the apple trees were injured by the freeze on the nights of May 9...
