Excerpt: . . . part of the ship - that being deeper in the water forward, she might steer the better. We had very stormy weather, which is rare in these lati- tudes. Saw the same tunnies. Fine weather, but sometimes squally, prevailed on the 29. We saw some frigate-birds, and a white bird, with wings marked with grey. At sun-set, we saw a ship to windward, steering the same course as we. We enjoyed a fine fresh wind and beautiful the 30. The air cooler. We saw the ship we had seen last night, a little to windward. She had crouded sail; we did the like; she hoisted English colours, we ours. We caught tunnies, and saw flying-fish. THE SEA AND FISHES. A MORE dismal sight than the main sea is scarcely to be seen. A man becomes presently impatient of being in the centre of a circle, the circumference of which he never attains. It however presents some very interesting scenes. I do not speak of it when tempestuous only. During a calm, and especially at night in hot climates, it is surprizing to see the sparkling of it. I have taken in a glass some of those luminous points of which it is full; and have seen them move about with great vivacity. They are said to be the fry of fish; and are sometimes seen in a heap together, appearing like moons. At night, when the ship is under way, and is surrounded by...
