Engulf d a shallop may have been Near to the Maiden Isle, But when drink muddles Celtic een It needs no spaewife s song, I ween, Their senses to beguile. Old Esop of a Frog doth tell, Who wasted all his energies. That he might other Frogs excel, And match the Ox in weight and size. So Superstition facts doth swell Till pigmies grow to prodigies; So potent is her mighty spell That nought is truth save dreams and lies. Now mark what to this Frog befell--He burst before the Froglings eyes; But Superstition dark and fell Thrives most on what she magnifies. She maketh earth a hideous hell, Replete with monstrous fantasies; Her carnival is Reason s knell--She revels mid his obsequies....
